Equipment Shed

Exterior

This one-story building is constructed of steel I-beams bolted together to form the framing. They are sheathed with corrugated metal panels. The walls are canted in at approximately 20° from vertical and support a flat roof of the same materials and construction techniques as the walls. The foundation is a concrete slab that also serves as the interior flooring. There is a steel entry door and overhead tracked sliding doors at the east elevation. External light is admitted to the building through translucent fiberglass panels set in the walls. A wood framed shed (HABS CO-129-E) connects the building to the chicken coop (HABS CO-129-D). It was built during the 1970s of new materials.<sup>1</sup>

Interior

The interior is of exposed steel beam framing and metal and is otherwise unfinished. The interior is presently used for storage of oil cans and other trash and debris.

Existing Condition

The equipment shed building is in good condition at the present time.
